

Apel Władimira Bukowskiego o sąd nad komunizmem

Niedawno zmarły rosyjski dysydent Władimir Bukowski do końca życia niestrudzenie dążył do rozliczenia zbrodni komunistycznych. Wraz z Renato Cristinem, profesorem Uniwersytetu w Trieście, zaapelował o powołanie trybunału, którego zadaniem miałoby być osądzenie zbrodniarzy komunistycznych. Pod apelem, który okazał się swoistym testamentem Bukowskiego, podpisało się już wielu europejskich i światowych intelektualistów. Inicjatywę wsparła również Platforma Europejskiej Pamięci i Sumienia.

Autorzy apelu postulują powołanie instytucji na wzór Międzynarodowego Trybunału w Norymberdze, który doprowadziłby do osądzenia zbrodni dokonanych przez reżimy komunistyczne i ukarania ich sprawców. Jak piszą, proces zmierzający do wymierzenia sprawiedliwości jest „obowiązkiem wobec człowieczeństwa, który nakłada na nas sumienie (...) w imieniu ofiar ludobójstwa, całej ludzkości, a także przyszłych pokoleń”.

Inicjatorami dokumentu są Władimir Bukowski, dysydent i obrońca praw człowieka w ZSRR, wielokrotnie represjonowany i więziony przez sowieckie władze, który do końca swego życia walczył o sprawiedliwość dla ofiar reżimów komunistycznych na całym świecie oraz Renato Cristin, profesor hermeneutyki filozoficznej na Uniwersytecie w Trieście, kierujący również Instytutem Kultury Włoskiej w Berlinie oraz liberalno-konserwatywnym think-thankiem „Fondazione Liberal”.

Przypadająca w tym miesiącu 30. rocznica upadku Muru Berlińskiego to, zdaniem Bukowskiego i Cristina, stosowna okazja do rozpoczęcia tej inicjatywy, wobec czego wezwali intelektualistów i działaczy politycznych z całego świata do zaangażowania się w jej rozpowszechnianie. Swojego poparcia udzieliła już Platforma Europejskiej Pamięci i Sumienia, która w 2015 roku zapoczątkowała projekt Justice 2.0, również zmierzający do dokumentowania i osądzenia zbrodni komunistycznych reżimów. Platforma Europejskiej Pamięci i Sumienia, skupiająca 62 instytucje w Europie, Stanach Zjednoczonych i Kanadzie, pracuje na rzecz demokracji, praw człowieka i prawdy historycznej – protestowała m.in. przeciwko fałszującej historię narracji Domu Historii Europejskiej.

– Od wielu lat narasta poczucie, że istnieje olbrzymia rozbieżność pomiędzy tym, jak traktowano zbrodnie nazistowskie i zbrodnie komunistyczne. I nie ma na to wpływu fakt, że w wielu krajach, tak jak chociażby w Polsce, wciąż mają miejsce procesy poszczególnych funkcjonariuszy komunistycznych, zwykle niższego szczebla, odpowiedzialnych za zbrodnie. Brakuje generalnego spojrzenia na komunizm i jego oceny: zarówno w wymiarze formalnoprawnym, jak i moralnym oraz politycznym – powiedział Teologii Politycznej Łukasz Kamiński, prezes Platformy Europejskiej Pamięci i Sumienia.

Pod wezwaniem podpisali się już m.in. Dariusz Karłowicz, Dariusz Gawin, Łukasz Kamiński, Robert Kostro, Paweł Ukielski, Ryszard Legutko, Jacek Saryusz-Wolski, a także Stéphane Courtois, Chantal Delsol, Jewgienij Kissin, Daniel Pipes i były przewodniczący Parlamentu Europejskiego Antonio Tajani.

Poniżej pełna treść dokumentu:

Appeal for Nuremberg Trials for Communism

The thirtieth anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall is the occasion to offer a contribution not only to historic memory, but also the concrete development of an anti-totalitarian culture, broad in scope and looking toward the future, with the goal of achieving a trial with the same sense and value as Nuremberg Trials for communism.

The Nuremberg Trials of 1945-46 tried and sentenced the criminals of National Socialism and their leaders, resulting in a final judicial, moral, and political judgment on that totalitarianism.

Today, after the catastrophic experiences of so-called "real socialism", but also of all the dictatorships which in various forms harked back, and do so even today, to communist ideology, historic events require a similarly final judgment, not only historic but also political and moral, on the theoretical and practical results of this ideology, its crimes, its sins against humanity.

Communism did not fall with the wall. Anyone can see that this ideology is still active in the world, in the form of state and party, political and cultural.

It is therefore necessary to create Nuremberg Trials for Communism, a global trial which scrutinizes the substantive crimes of this ideology, establishes political and institutional responsibility for them, penalizes its moral degeneration, and reveals not only its incompatibility with free societies, but also its intrinsic inhumanity.

We are aware of the practical difficulties and the legal limits of this initiative, yet we believe that these limits cannot block the creation of a historic and political, ethical, and cultural trial, which historical conscience itself imposes upon us as a duty to humanity.

The various communist or socialist dictatorships from 1917 up to today have caused more than 100 million deaths around the world. In fact, in addition to the suppression of individual liberties and the spread of class hatred, the crimes of communism are characterized by genocide and mass killings. Since genocides and massacres are universally recognized as crimes against humanity, and in the name of that exterminated humanity and of humanity in general, and of future generations, Nuremberg Trials for Communism must be instituted.

Our objective is an international trial, supported by governments and institutions, anti-Communist political parties and their parliamentary groups of all free nations, scholars, and specialists. The trial will be the joint effort of the organizations that protect the memory of those crimes and monitor current crimes, anti-Communist media, and all authentically liberal and conservative media, intellectuals, and all who wish to defend the free world.

And the 30th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin wall is precisely the symbolic occasion to begin this initiative for freedom, justice, and humanity.
